Summary

About this Release

A three level hierarchical classification developed for use in the collection and publication of crime statistics. It is used in all ABS collections requiring a classification of offences, and the ABS encourages its use by other government bodies and the community in general.

This publication has been converted from older electronic formats and does not necessarily have the same appearance and functionality as later releases.

Preface

Contents >> Preface

The Australian Standard Offence Classification (ASOC) has been developed by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) for use in the collection and publication of crime and justice statistics. It provides a classificatory framework for the comparison of statistics on offences across Australia.

It replaces the Australian National Classification of Offences (ANCO), 1985, Cat. no. 1234.0, published by the ABS in 1985. The development of the ASOC resulted both from the need to update the existing classification and to address its recognised deficiencies.

The ABS will update the ASOC on a regular basis to account for changes in the law and in response to issues identified in its use.

Users and producers of crime and justice statistics and of the existing ANCO in all Australian State, Territory and Commonwealth criminal justice jurisdictions, have been consulted in the development of the ASOC. The assistance provided by these individuals and organisations during the development of the classification is gratefully acknowledged.

Overview

Contents >> Chapter 1: Introduction >> Overview

The Australian Standard Offence Classification (ASOC) has been developed for use within Australia for the production and analysis of crime and justice statistics. It replaces the Australian National Classification of Offences (ANCO) which was released in 1985.

The objective of the classification is to provide a uniform national statistical framework for classifying offences for use by justice agencies and other persons and agencies with an interest in crime and justice issues.

The ASOC is to be progressively introduced into ABS statistical collections. It is anticipated that key agencies within the crime and justice system will introduce it into their data collections on reported crime, court activities and corrections as soon as is practicable. In the course of implementing the ASOC, each State and Territory will need to undertake a detailed mapping program that will link every individual criminal offence within their statutes to a single ASOC category. When completed this linkage will be compiled into a single detailed concordance by the ABS.

In the development of the ASOC considerable emphasis has been placed on the need to present an up-to-date reflection of the various criminal statutes. A maintenance program is proposed, aimed at ensuring that the ASOC does not become outdated. It is believed that this approach will lead to significant improvements in the comparability of crime statistics on both a State and national level.

Historical development

In June 1980 the Draft Australian National Classification of Offences was widely circulated and subsequently put into use by various agencies, particularly in the preparation of court statistics. This use, and the resulting feedback from the cooperating agencies, greatly assisted the ABS in developing the 1985 version of the ANCO.

The purpose of the ANCO was to provide a universal hierarchical framework, capable of being applied at various levels, for classifying offences for statistical purposes. It was envisaged that agencies such as the police, courts, legal aid and corrections would, along with the ABS itself, be the major users, though it was acknowledged that some of the lower level categories within the classification would not apply to all agencies.

Over time the number of legislative changes and additions to the criminal law, in conjunction with the identified deficiencies in the ANCO, reduced the classification's usefulness for the production and analysis of comparable national crime and justice statistics. As a consequence the ABS commenced a review of the classification in 1995.

The principal objectives were to:

- improve and update the relationship between the revised classification and the criminal legal codes in the various Australian jurisdictions;
- maintain a degree of compatibility between the existing and new classifications; and
- make its use and/or application more consistent by eliminating the need for users to develop their own individual interpretations.

Approaches to the classification of offences

During the review of ANCO several possible approaches to the classification of offences were identified and considered. These included:

- categories based on legal distinctions;
- categories based on offence seriousness;
- categories based on 'behavioural' characteristics of the offence;
- categories based on characteristics of the victim; and
- categories based on significant policy or research issues.

Categories based on legal distinctions

A legal classificatory framework is based on distinctions between offences where the legal elements of the offences are different. These may include distinctions embodied in legislation, or distinctions in case law or legal procedure. In general, categories based on legal distinctions are meaningful from the point of view of criminal justice system practitioners: the police, courts and corrective services.

A legally-based framework would, however, have limitations:

- It would require that for the major offences, legally-based definitions must be developed. This could compound rather than ease the problem of developing ASOC groups which are both detailed and comparable across jurisdictions. There are significant variations in the way that legislation prescribes apparently similar offence types in different States, Territories and in Commonwealth law.
- It would not adequately take certain important uses of ASOC into account, such as for policy or criminological research or for police intelligence gathering, all of which require categorisations which are not reflected in legal distinctions.

Categories based on offence seriousness

There were a number of possible approaches based on the concept of offence seriousness. These could take the form of an offence 'hierarchy', in which legally defined offences are ordered according to their degree of seriousness. Seriousness can be ranked in terms of the severity of the maximum statutory penalty, the average penalty applied, or some measure of perceived seriousness. Alternatively, the concept could be applied by identifying various characteristics of offences to be used as the basis for differentiation on the basis of seriousness. Such characteristics could include whether or not violence is associated with the offence, whether or not a weapon was used, or whether or not other 'aggravating' characteristics such as the nature of the relationship between the offender and victim were present.

The principal difficulties associated with a classificatory approach based on offence seriousness are:

- The approach relies on the ability to determine the most serious of any given pair of offences using an agreed set of criteria to define seriousness. Within Australia there is substantial inter-jurisdictional variation in the maximum penalties for offences and in the average penalty applied. For any single offence, there can be a great deal of variation between the minimum, maximum and average penalty applied, and any average could therefore provide a misleading measure.
- Other methods such as those involving public perceptions of offence seriousness are even more problematic. They are difficult to determine initially, can vary considerably across geographic regions and within jurisdictions and can alter dramatically as a consequence of even a single, well publicised case.
- Ranking offence groups and subgroups by seriousness could lead to inconsistencies within the classification structure. For example, since arson would be ranked much higher than removing boundary markers, the existing ANCO grouping of property damage could not be maintained in the ASOC. Groupings based solely on offence seriousness would, on the other hand, lead to non-intuitive groupings, with aggravated sexual assault, attempted murder and drug importation all conceivably falling within the same broad category.

One option considered was to use offence seriousness as a secondary criterion to assist in the selection of offence characteristics which can themselves be used to develop the framework. Thus offences could be separated into violent and non-violent offences, those involving and not involving a weapon or those exceeding or not exceeding a property value threshold to separate property offences. Seriousness in this more general sense has been incorporated in the ASOC.

Categories based on behavioural characteristics

Behavioural approaches to the classification of offences rely on defining offence groupings in terms of the behaviour associated with the offence. For example, all sexual offences would be grouped together, all violent thefts would be grouped together, as would all assaults, and all offences involving illicit drug use. It could be seen that the legislative framework described above is a variety of this behavioural type of framework. A purely behavioural framework would not, however, be limited to or restricted by legislative distinctions, and other aspects of offences which are deemed to be important can be included. Thus, shoplifting, which is not a separate offence under legislation, could be distinguished from other forms of theft. Similarly, robbery involving a firearm could be distinguished from other forms of armed robbery.

The principal issues with a strict behavioural approach involve determining which elements of behaviour are important for the purpose of the classification and assigning relative priorities when more than one important element of behaviour is involved.

Categories based on victim characteristics

Some important distinctions between offences are based on the characteristics of the victim, for example the victim's age or mental state. Victim-based distinctions could be applied to property-related offences, such as when one wishes to distinguish between thefts from businesses as opposed to private individuals. Many victim-based distinctions are also the basis of legal distinctions (as in the case of sexual assault offences), or are relevant to distinctions based on the behavioural elements of the offence or offence seriousness. Thus, a classification based on legal, behavioural or seriousness distinctions also incorporates many of the important victim characteristics.

Categories based on significant policy or research issues

In some cases, it is important to distinguish between offences in a manner that allows information to be derived for policy development, evaluative, research or monitoring activities. For example, an important issue in the categorisation of firearms offences could be the nature of the weapon involved. To the extent that policy or research activities could be associated with the creation of new legislation or the amendment of existing laws, the policy or research driven classificatory structure could impose distinctly different requirements to a legal one. The principal drawback to categories based on policy or research issues is that these issues are relatively volatile, and a classificatory structure that reflects significant issues at one point in time could quickly become outdated.

Conceptual basis of the classification

Contents >> Chapter 1: Introduction >> Conceptual basis of the classification

Scope of the classification

The primary purpose of the ASOC, is to provide a systematic ordering of the set of offences defined, either implicitly in the common law or explicitly in the legal codes of the Australian Commonwealth Government, and State and Territory governments. For the purposes of ASOC, an offence is defined as: any act or omission by a person, persons, organisation or organisations for which a penalty could be imposed by the Australian legal system.

The classification therefore covers all unlawful acts and omissions included in the common law or statutes of all the Australian Commonwealth, State and Territory jurisdictions. In addition it is intended to include matters dealt with by any professional tribunals, military tribunals or traditional law forums in instances where these authorities are legally empowered to impose penalties that might otherwise be dealt with by the legal systems.

None of the definitions of categories are couched in strict legal terms, but the language used is quite specifically chosen to minimise any confusion as to the boundaries of each category. As a result the content of each category is uniform across all jurisdictions.

There are some matters that are specifically excluded from the ASOC that could, in certain instances, be considered to be of a criminal nature. These include some child welfare matters and some Court Orders such as Apprehended Violence Orders or Family Court Orders. However, breaches of these Court Orders are included.

Classification criteria

Each of the classificatory approaches previously outlined offer particular advantages. However, it was felt that none of these approaches, taken in isolation, would have provided a sufficient basis for a conceptually sound and operationally useful classification. Accordingly an approach was adopted which reflected some aspects of all options. At the broadest level, the classification has distinctions based on the most fundamental elements of legal and behavioural criteria. These include:

- whether the offence involved the use of violence;
- whether the offence compromised the safety or well-being of persons or was primarily or solely directed at the acquisition or damage of property;
- whether the offence involved an intentional act or resulted from recklessness or negligence; and
- whether the offence had a specific victim, or constituted a breach of public order or other social codes.

In general, criteria based on seriousness and victim characteristics have been applied at the more detailed levels of the classification. For some offences, an attempt has been made to distinguish between the less serious and the more serious or 'aggravated' form of an offence.

Where aggravated offences have been so distinguished, it has been done by listing all circumstances regarded as aggravating in any jurisdiction. The effect of this method is that where one jurisdiction defines an offence as aggravated based on some feature of the offence, then offences of this type in all jurisdictions are classified as aggravated. It is possible that this could lead to distortions in any comparison between States and Territories of, for example, penalty information for these 'like' offences. In addition there could also be minor problems in classifying some offences accurately where the legislation in some jurisdictions does not treat a specific circumstance as aggravated.

Thus six criteria were used in the development of the classification. These are: Violence; Acquisition; Nature of Victim; Ancillary Offences; Seriousness, and Intent. These criteria are defined as follows:

Violence

Whether violence is involved. If violence is involved the nature of the violence is considered, including whether a weapon was used, whether abduction or deprivation of liberty was involved, whether the violence was sexual in nature and the outcome of the violence (e.g. whether life was taken, threatened or endangered).

Acquisition

Whether the intent of the offence is acquisitive. If so, the method of acquisition including theft, the use of extortion or blackmail, or the use of deception.

Nature of Victim

The nature and vulnerability of the victim or object offended against. Types of victims include persons, property, and the community.

Ancillary Offences

Whether the offence depends for its existence on another offence. Such offences include attempts, threats and conspiracies to commit another offence, or offences involving the intent that another offence shall take place.

Seriousness

Seriousness can be reflected by whether or not the offence involved a personal victim or it can be measured as a function of factors of aggravation, such as whether the victim was vulnerable, whether the offence was committed in company, or whether a weapon was used.

Intent

Whether the offence occurs as the result of a negligent or reckless act, or as the result of an intent to commit an offence. This criterion distinguishes, for example, manslaughter from murder.

Design constraints

Certain constraints, though not classification criteria in a technical sense, were considered to be of particular importance in the development of the classification. They include:

- The categories should be consistent, as far as possible, with the various legal definitions and the criminal codes.
- The categories must be susceptible to reliable coding. That is, it must be possible to determine the category of the classification on the basis of the information typically reported in the range of data collection activities in which the classification is to be used.

- The impact of classification distinctions on counting rules must be acceptable.
- The classification should allow the provision of information to address important areas of social concern such as weapon violations and crime associated with drugs.
- The classification should exhibit statistical balance. That is, offences should be distributed relatively evenly across the classification rather than concentrated in a few particular categories.

Other considerations

In addition to the classification criteria and design constraints, certain other issues were considered.

Level of detail desired

If, for example, a purely legislatively based framework had been adopted, offences such as shoplifting would not be able to be distinguished from other forms of theft, leading to problems of interpretation. An alternative example would be including the prescribed levels of blood alcohol for driving offences, as the levels are not the same in every jurisdiction and may be changed from time to time. A balance between detail and comparability has therefore been struck.

Cross-classification with other data variables

Some offence information needs can be readily satisfied by cross-classifying offences with other variables. This approach avoids the need to add complex, detailed and potentially repetitive categories to the classification structure. Examples of cross-classification include a location classification (retail shop/bank etc.) with unlawful entry categories, a weapons classification (type of weapon used) with robbery and a relationship classification (husband/step-child etc.) with sexual assault.

Consistency with 1985 ANCO classification

It is recognised that the 1985 ANCO is currently widely used in criminal justice agency information systems, and that the implementation and acceptance of the ASOC would be partly dependent upon the degree of compatibility between the old and new classifications.

Application of the criteria

In applying the classification criteria the following approach has been adopted. At the broad level of the classification each division has been made relatively homogeneous in terms of the Violence and Acquisition criteria described above. This means that in general, a division does not include both offences where violence is involved and offences where violence is not involved. There are exceptions to this general rule, notably Division 13, which includes riot and affray together with non-violent offences such as censorship crimes and Division 06, which includes armed robbery together with demands made via a letter. This latter offence could be considered non-violent in nature. In both these situations it was considered that the overall intent of the divisions and the intuitive sense of the approach adopted overrode strict application of the criteria.

Similarly, divisions generally avoid mixing offences where the intent is acquisitive with offences where the primary intent is not acquisitive. The exception to this rule is in Division 06 where Blackmail/Extortion is grouped together with Robbery. The former offence may, in certain circumstances, be intended to cause the victim loss of something other than property, or to act in ways not necessarily resulting in an acquisitive gain on the part of the offender. Again, the strict application of the criteria would have created other problems.

Attempt, and aid and abet offences apply generally at the more detailed levels of the classification. Thus attempts are generally classified in the same subdivision as the offence which was being attempted, threatened or intended. Criminal intent offences together with most conspiracies, other than conspiracy to murder, are coded to Division 13 – Public Order Offences.

The Seriousness criterion has been applied at the subdivision and group levels of the classification, following the principle that, wherever possible, the more serious offences within a division should be able to be identified separately. No effort however has been made to make divisions and subdivisions homogenous in terms of seriousness, as this would be inconsistent with the application of other classification criteria. Similarly, no attempt has been made to rank divisions in the classification in order of seriousness. Wherever possible aggravated forms of particular offence types are separately identified, and aggravating factors are listed.

Divisions 01 to 06 of the classification structure were developed with the rationale that they have a common feature: namely, that they all involve offences committed against a person. That is:

- They all relate to culpable (i.e. intentional, negligent or reckless) acts which result in harm (i.e. physical injury/violation, or non-physical harm). These acts are not necessarily completed, they include attempts and conspiracies.
- These acts must affect a specific person as opposed to the general public. That is, the victim(s) can only ever be a distinct person or persons. Thus, the acts cannot be committed against organisations or the state or community.

The primary basis for distinguishing between Divisions 01 to 06 is the nature and degree of harm. The secondary basis of classification is whether the act was intentional or negligent.

For some offences in Divisions 03 and 04, the nature of the victim is also a factor, but only in cases of non-assaultive sexual offences against children and neglect of persons under care.

Divisions 06 to 09 inclusive and Division 12 are offences which generally relate to property and which, with the exception of Division 06, do not involve any offence against the person. Divisions 06 to 09 in particular have a secondary common feature in that they involve the obtaining of a benefit. These divisions are distinguished from one another by whether or not violence was involved, and by the method of acquisition. Thus, robbery is distinguished from theft, and theft distinguished from deception offences. Division 12, which contains property damage as opposed to its acquisition, also includes environmental pollution.

Divisions 10 and 11, and 13 to 16 inclusive are offences against organisations, government (local, State or Federal) and the community in general, rather than against particular individual persons.

The classificatory structure of some divisions, such as Divisions 10, 11 and 14, have been specified in a manner intended to reflect user requirements relating to policy and/or research issues concerning offences involving drugs, firearms and vehicles.

Classification and code structure

Contents >> Chapter 1: Introduction >> Classification and code structure

The 1997 ASOC has a three level structure. The division is the broadest level and has a two-digit code (e.g. 01), the subdivision is the intermediate level and has a three-digit code (e.g. 011) and the group is the most detailed level and has a four-digit code (e.g. 0111).

The main purpose of divisions is to provide a limited number of categories which represent broad groups of criminal offences suitable for publication of summary statistics. There are 16 divisions within the ASOC with the codes numbered 01 to 16.

The subdivision and group levels provide increasingly detailed dissections of these broad categories.

The three-digit code structure that represents the 46 subdivisions ranges from 011 to 169. There are many unused numbers within this range, which provides scope for expansion of the classification structure in future editions. Subdivision codes are created by appending a digit between 1 and 9 to the two-digit division code to which they are linked. No division has more than 5 subdivisions, although the code structure provides for up to 9, no subdivision code ends in zero and all subdivision codes ending in 9 are 'Other' or residual categories, that is they represent categories which are clearly a part of the broader division but can not be included in any of the other specified subdivisions.

The four-digit code structure that represents the 120 groups ranges from 0111 to 1699. There are again many gaps within this range. As with the subdivisions this provides scope for expansion of the classification structure in future editions. Group codes are created by appending a digit between 1 and 9 to the three-digit subdivision code to which they are linked. No subdivision has more than 7 groups, although the code structure provides for up to 9, no group code ends in zero and all group codes ending in 9 are 'nec' (not elsewhere classified) or residual categories, that is they represent categories which are clearly a part of the broader subdivision but can not be included in any of the other specified groups.

The structure of the classification does not contain any seriousness hierarchy and classification codes cannot and should not be used as an index of seriousness.

Supplementary codes

When the data provided are inadequate to allow a four-digit group to be allocated a Supplementary code may be applied. Supplementary codes may be generated by taking a three-digit subdivision code and adding a single zero to it to make a four-digit code.

In any instances where a subdivision cannot be selected, the most suitable division is selected and two zeros are appended to its code to make a four-digit code.

There are two further Supplementary codes that may be used, but only if the situation explicitly warrants it. If the data provided cannot be assigned to any ASOC division, and there is no provision for contacting the data provider, then the four-digit code of 9999 can be used. If no data at all are provided, and again there is no provision for contacting the data provider, then the four-digit code of 9998 can be used.

A full listing of these Supplementary codes and their titles is provided at the end of the classification structure.

Concordances

Concordances between classifications show the relationship between the various categories within them, and therefore the degree of comparability of the data classified to them.

This publication includes a broad concordance between the 1985 ANCO and the 1997 ASOC. It is intended that detailed concordances between the ASOC and the actual criminal statutes of the Commonwealth, States and Territories will be available when these have been compiled.

Keyword index of criminal offences or activities

The Index of Offences included in this publication covers only those offences, or common term interpretations of those offences, that are actually and specifically mentioned somewhere within the text of the classification. This index is suitable for finding the Group to which an offence would be classified, providing there exists some general understanding of the nature of the offence (as opposed to the specific criminal offence title).

01 Homicide and Related Offences

Contents >> Chapter 3: Definitions >> 01 Homicide and Related Offences

Division 01 - Homicide and Related Offences

The unlawful killing, attempted unlawful killing or conspiracy to kill another person.

This Division is further disaggregated into subdivisions on the basis of the level of culpability involved as reflected by:

- a criminal intent in the form of either an intent to kill or to commit a crime leading to the killing of another person; or
- the degree of involvement in the physical act of killing another person.

Offences in this division are classified into the following subdivisions:

011 Murder

012 Conspiracies and Attempts to Murder

013 Manslaughter and Driving Causing Death

Inclusions:

Killing on provocation

Killing an unborn child

Accelerating death

Where injury or death might be prevented by proper precaution

Death caused by an act or omission during surgical or medical treatment

Exclusions:

The procurement and/or committing of an illegal abortion is excluded from this division as in legal terms it is not treated as a homicide. It is coded to Group 1695, Procure or Commit Illegal Abortion

Subdivision 011 - Murder

The unlawful killing of another person where there is either the intent to kill, the intent to cause grievous bodily harm, with the knowledge that it was probable that death or grievous bodily harm would occur (reckless indifference to life), or without intent to kill in the course of committing a crime (felony murder).

This subdivision is not further disaggregated.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following group:

0111 Murder

0111 Murder

The unlawful killing of another person where there is either the intent to kill, the intent to cause grievous bodily harm, with the knowledge that it was probable that death or grievous bodily harm would occur (reckless indifference to life), or without intent to kill in the course of committing a crime (felony murder).

Exclusions:

Aiding suicide. This is coded to Group 0131, Manslaughter

Infanticide. This is coded to Group 0131, Manslaughter

Illegal abortion. This is coded to Group 1695, Procure or Commit Illegal Abortion

Subdivision 012 - Conspiracies and Attempts to Murder

The agreement or soliciting of an agreement to unlawfully kill, or the attempted unlawful killing of another person, where there is either the intent to kill or to cause grievous bodily harm with the knowledge that it was probable that death or grievous bodily harm would occur (reckless indifference to life).

This subdivision is further disaggregated on the basis of whether or not conspiracy was involved.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0121 Conspiracy to Murder

0122 Attempted Murder

0121 Conspiracy to Murder

The agreement or soliciting of an agreement to unlawfully kill another person.

Exclusions:

Conspiracy to procure an illegal abortion. This is coded to Group 1695, Procure or Commit Illegal Abortion

0122 Attempted Murder

The attempted unlawful killing of another person where there is either the intent to kill or to cause grievous bodily harm with the knowledge that it was probable that death or grievous bodily harm would occur (reckless indifference to life) but where death did not actually occur.

Exclusions:

Inflict injury where there was not an intent to kill the other person. This is coded to Division 02, Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Subdivision 013 - Manslaughter And Driving Causing Death

The unlawful killing of another person while deprived of the power of self-control by provocation or under circumstances amounting to diminished responsibility or without intent to kill, either as a result of a careless, reckless, negligent, unlawful or dangerous act.

This subdivision is further disaggregated on the basis of the means by which death resulted.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0131 Manslaughter

0132 Driving Causing Death

0131 Manslaughter

The unlawful killing of another person while deprived of the power of self-control by provocation or under circumstances amounting to diminished responsibility or without intent to kill, as a result of a careless, reckless, negligent, unlawful or dangerous act (other than the act of driving).

Inclusions:

The killing of an unborn child, infanticide
Killing by the use of excessive force in self-defence
Survive suicide pact
Assist in suicide of another person

Exclusions:

Breaches of Euthanasia Legislation not amounting to actual assistance. These are coded to Group 1329, Regulated Public Order Offences, nec

02 Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Contents >> Chapter 3: Definitions >> 02 Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Division 02 - Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Acts, excluding attempted murder and those resulting in death (Division 01), which are intended to cause non-fatal injury or harm to another person and where there is no sexual or acquisitive element.

This division is further disaggregated into subdivisions on the basis of whether or not an act constitutes a direct assault upon a person or persons.

Offences in this division are classified into the following subdivisions:

021 Assault

029 Other Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Inclusions:

Offences that involve reckless behaviour amounting to intentionality or malice

Exclusions:

Sexual assault and related offences are excluded from this division as they are sufficiently distinct to form a separate division, Division 03, Sexual Assault and Related Offences

Dangerous or negligent acts causing or potentially causing harm are excluded from this division on the basis that there is not an intention to cause harm. These acts are sufficiently distinct to form a separate division, Division 04, Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons. Should it not be possible to determine whether there was intent or not, the default is to code to Division 04

Subdivision 021 - Assault

The direct (and immediate/confrontational) infliction of force, injury or violence upon a person or persons or the direct (and immediate/confrontational) threat of force, injury or violence where there is an apprehension that the threat could be enacted.

This subdivision is further disaggregated on the basis of whether or not the assault involved aggravated circumstances.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0211 Aggravated Assault
0212 Non-Aggravated Assault

Inclusions:

This subdivision specifically includes face-to-face threatening behaviour if it is believed that the threat could be enacted. Where the existence of aggravating circumstances cannot be determined then 021 applies

Exclusions:

Ill-treatment of children/child neglect. These are coded to Group 0491, Neglect of Person Under Care

Hinder/obstruct police officers or justice officials. This is coded to Group 1522, Resist or Hinder Police Officer or Justice Official

Hinder/obstruct government officers involved in maintaining government security. This is coded to Subdivision 153, Offences Against Government Security

Threats to kill. These are coded to Group 1613, Threatening Behaviour

Use of force as part of a robbery unless specifically described as a separate offence of 'assault' or 'assault and robbery'

0211 - Aggravated Assault

An assault, as defined in Subdivision 021, Assault, involving any of the following aggravating circumstances:

- causing serious bodily injury;
- carried out in company;
- carried out using a weapon;
- carried out with the intent of preventing apprehension or committing a felony; or
- committed with the intent to recklessly endanger life or cause injury.

Inclusions:

Intentionally causing grievous bodily harm

0212 Non-Aggravated Assault

An assault not involving any aggravating circumstances as defined in Group 0211, Aggravated Assault.

Inclusions:

Common assault
Assault police
Assault officer in execution of his/her duty

Subdivision 029 - Other Acts Intended To Cause Injury

Acts involving the indirect and non-confrontational infliction of harm, injury or violence upon a person. Acts which, though not intended to cause harm, actually or potentially result in injury to oneself or another person are coded to Division 4.

This subdivision is not further disaggregated.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following group:

0299 Acts Intended to Cause Injury, nec

0299 Acts Intended to Cause Injury, nec

Other acts intended to cause injury not elsewhere classified in Division 02, Acts Intended To Cause Injury.

Inclusions:

Administering illicit drugs
Administering poison
Setting mantraps
Stupefying

Exclusions:

This group specifically excludes threatening behaviour. Where this action is direct (face-to-face) and it is believed that the threat could be enacted it constitutes assault and is coded to Subdivision 021, Assault. Where the action is not face-to-face it is coded to Group 1613, Threatening Behaviour

Subdivision 031 - Sexual Assault

Physical contact of a sexual nature directed toward another person where that person does not give consent, gives consent as a result of intimidation or fraud, or consent is proscribed (i.e. the person is legally deemed incapable of giving consent because of youth, temporary/permanent (mental) incapacity or there is a familial relationship).

This subdivision is further disaggregated on the basis of whether or not the sexual assault involved aggravated circumstances. Where the existence of aggravating circumstances cannot be determined then 031 applies.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0311 Aggravated Sexual Assault

0312 Non-Aggravated Sexual Assault

0311 Aggravated Sexual Assault

Sexual assault, as defined in Subdivision 031, Sexual Assault, involving any of the following aggravating circumstances:

- sexual intercourse (i.e. oral sex and/or penetration of either the vagina or anus by any part of the human body or by any object);
- infliction of injury or violence on the person;
- possession/use of a weapon;
- consent proscribed; or
- committed in company (i.e. by two or more persons).

Inclusions:

Incest
Rape
Unlawful sexual intercourse
Unlawful fellatio/cunnilingus
Carnal knowledge

0312 Non-Aggravated Sexual Assault

Sexual assault not involving any of the aggravating circumstances as defined in Group 0311, Aggravated Sexual Assault.

Inclusions:

Indecent assault not involving any aggravating circumstances

Subdivision 032 - Non-Assaultive Sexual Offences

Offences of a sexual nature against another person which do not involve physical contact with the person and where the person does not give consent, gives consent as a result of intimidation or fraud, or consent is proscribed (i.e. the person is legally deemed incapable of giving consent because of youth, temporary/permanent (mental) incapacity or there is a familial relationship).

This subdivision is further disaggregated on the basis of the age of the victim.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0321 Non-Assaultive Sexual Offences Against a Child

0329 Non-Assaultive Sexual Offences, nec

0321 Non-Assaultive Sexual Offences Against a Child

Offences of a sexual nature against a person under the age of 16 years which involve the presence of that person but not physical contact with that person.

Inclusions:

Procuring child for prostitution/pornography
Forcing a minor to witness an act of sexual intercourse

Exclusions:

The production (not involving the presence of the child depicted), possession, distribution or display of child pornography. This is coded to Group 1323, Censorship Offences.
Offences involving physical contact. These are coded to Group 0311, Aggravated Sexual Assault.

0329 Non-Assaultive Sexual Offences, nec

Sexual offences against the person not elsewhere classified in Subdivision 032, Non-Assaultive Sexual Offences.

Inclusions:

04 Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons

Contents >> Chapter 3: Definitions >> 04 Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons

Division 04 - Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons

Dangerous or negligent acts which, though not intended to cause harm, actually or potentially result in injury to oneself or another person.

This division is further disaggregated into subdivisions on the basis of whether or not the dangerous or negligent act involved the operation of a vehicle.

For the purposes of this division the definition of vehicle is any means of motorised or non-motorised transport in or on which something is carried, conveyed or travels. This includes but is not limited to: car, motor cycle, motorised caravan/campervan, truck, tractor, bus, train, tram, boat, aeroplane, bicycle, wheelchair, skateboard/skates/rollerblades, ride-on mower, horse, etc.

For the purposes of this division the definition of driving is operating or being legally in charge of a vehicle.

Offences in this division are classified into the following subdivisions:

041 Dangerous or Negligent Operation of a Vehicle
049 Other Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons

Exclusions:

Offences which result in death. These are coded to Division 01, Homicide and Related Offences

Offences where there is an intent to injure and where there is no sexual or acquisitive element. These are coded to Division 02, Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Offences that involve reckless behaviour amounting to intentionality or malice. These are coded to Division 02, Acts Intended to Cause Injury

Riot and affray. This is coded to Group 1319, Disorderly Conduct, nec

Driving offences not of a dangerous or negligent nature. These are coded to Division 14, Road Traffic and Motor Vehicle Regulatory Offences

Subdivision 041 - Dangerous or Negligent Operation of a Vehicle

The negligent operation of a vehicle (as defined at the start of this division) which, though not intended to cause harm, actually or potentially result in injury to oneself or another person.

This subdivision is disaggregated on the basis of the actual contributing factor (alcohol, drugs, carelessness or speed) that causes the culpable driving.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0411 Driving Under the Influence of Alcohol or Drugs

0412 Dangerous or Negligent Operation (Driving) of a Vehicle

Exclusions:

Dangerous or negligent acts not involving the operation of a vehicle. These are coded to Subdivision 049, Other Dangerous or Negligent Acts

0411 Driving Under the Influence of Alcohol or Drugs

Offences where the driver of a vehicle (as defined at the start of this division) is under the influence of alcohol or drugs, their driving is impaired and they actually do or potentially could cause an injury to themselves or another person.

Inclusions:

Driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs

Riding (bicycle, horse, skateboard, etc.) under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs

Exclusions:

Driving while exceeding the prescribed content of alcohol. This is coded to Group 1431, Exceeding the Prescribed Content of Alcohol Limit

0412 Dangerous or Negligent Operation (Driving) of a Vehicle

Dangerous, negligent or culpable operation (driving) of a vehicle (as defined at the start of this division) in a manner whereby an injury to themselves or another person occurs or is potentially likely to occur.

Inclusions:

Dangerous, negligent, careless or reckless driving

The negligent or reckless operation of a vehicle

Culpable navigation

Riding (bicycle, horse, skateboard, etc.) in a dangerous or negligent manner

Exclusions:

Driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs. This is coded to Group 0411, Driving Under the Influence of Alcohol or Drugs

Driving while exceeding the prescribed content of alcohol. This is coded to Group 1431, Exceeding the Prescribed Content of Alcohol Limit
Exceeding the legal speed limit. This is coded to Group 1432, Exceed Legal Speed Limit.

Subdivision 049 - Other Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons

Dangerous or negligent acts not involving the operation of a vehicle which, though not intended to cause harm, actually or potentially result in injury to oneself or another person.

This subdivision is further disaggregated to distinguish duty of care from other negligent acts that endanger persons that cannot be placed anywhere else in this division.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

0491 Neglect of Person Under Care

0499 Other Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons, nec

0491 Neglect of Person Under Care

A negligent act or omission by a person, not involving the operation of a vehicle, with a duty of care which, though not intended to cause harm, actually or potentially result in injury to the person under care.

Inclusions:

Ill-treatment of persons

Child neglect

0499 Other Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons, nec

All other negligent acts not involving the operation of a vehicle which, though not intended to cause harm, actually or potentially result in injury to oneself or another person which cannot be classified elsewhere in Subdivision 049, Other Dangerous or Negligent Acts Endangering Persons.

Inclusions:

Causing grievous bodily harm by a negligent act or omission

Exclusions:

Jaywalking and other pedestrian offences. These are coded to Group 1441, Pedestrian Offences
Neglect of persons. This is coded to Group 0491, Neglect of Persons Under Care.

Subdivision 052 - Deprivation of Liberty/False Imprisonment

The unlawful detainment of another person against their will or against the will of any parent, guardian or other person having lawful custody or care of that person, and not involving the taking away of the person.

This subdivision is not further disaggregated.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following group:

0521 Deprivation of Liberty/False Imprisonment

0521 Deprivation of Liberty/False Imprisonment

The unlawful detainment of another person against their will or against the will of any parent, guardian or other person having lawful custody or care of that person, and not involving the taking away of the person.

Inclusions:

- Taking hostage(s) in a siege situation, provided that the hostage is not transported to a different location

06 Robbery, Extortion and Related Offences

Contents >> Chapter 3: Definitions >> 06 Robbery, Extortion and Related Offences

Division 06 - Robbery, Extortion and Related Offences

Acts intended to unlawfully gain money, property or other thing of value from, or to cause detriment to, another person by using the threat of force or any other coercive measure.

This division is further disaggregated on the basis of whether or not the act involved only the use and/or threatened use of immediate force or violence.

Offences in this division are classified into the following subdivisions:

- 061 Robbery
- 062 Blackmail and Extortion

Subdivision 061 - Robbery

The unlawful taking of property, with intent to permanently deprive the owner of the property, from the immediate possession, control, custody or care of a person, accompanied by the use, and/or threatened use of immediate force or violence.

This subdivision is further disaggregated on the basis of whether or not the robbery involved aggravating circumstances.

Offences in this subdivision are classified into the following groups:

- 0611 Aggravated Robbery
- 0612 Non-Aggravated Robbery

Inclusions:

Demand money with menaces - where demand is made face-to-face and there are no further threats
